2021 WAS A RECORD YEAR

It's been a record year for the cryptocurrency market, which briefly surpassed $3 trillion in value in November. Bitcoin, the largest cryptocurrency by market value, and Ether, the second-largest, hit all-time highs, while altcoins, like meme-inspired dogecoin, surged in popularity.

Other digital assets, like nonfungible tokens, or NFTs, sold for millions of dollars alongside fine art in major auction houses. In addition to art, NFTs representing in-game assets and digital land soared in value as well. Blockchain-based applications, including decentralized finance, or DeFi, garnered interest from both retail and institutional investors, pushing the growth of Web3, which is the decentralized iteration of the internet based on blockchain technology that powers NFTs and underpins cryptocurrencies. All of this helped push cryptocurrency into the mainstream in 2021.

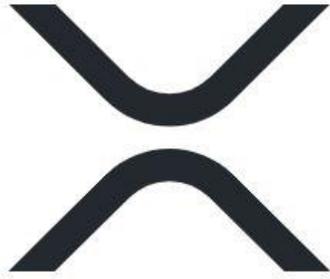

However, the crypto adoption in the US has been lagging. In its second annual Global Crypto Adoption Index, Chainalysis found that the top five countries for cryptocurrency acceptance were Vietnam, India, Pakistan, Ukraine, and Kenya. The U.S. slid from sixth to eighth in the ranking, while China fell from fourth to 13th -- in large part due to its ongoing crypto crackdown.

When you see commercials at the Superbowl for crypto's you know it has begun!

Be patient. I believe 2022 will bring explosive growth to the crypto space
