NON-FUNGIBLE TOKENS (NFT)

Non-fungible tokens (NFTs) are digital representations of one-of-a-kind assets and thus the tokens are not interchangeable. This is in contrast to cryptocurrencies like Bitcoin, and many network or utility tokens that are fungible in nature.

What are the Use Cases for NFTs?

The most common business case is for digital art. Collectible art, like the one here, is being sold for millions of dollars. This is not an exaggeration. But there are unlimited business cases for NFT's.

Anything that is a physical object can be put on the blockchain as an NFT. The possibilities are mindboggling. For example:

- Real estate could be tokenized and sold fractionally
- Stocks can be tokenized and sold fractionally
- Gaming artifacts can obtain value
- Musicians can link their audio pieces to NFTs to produce a collectible piece of music
- Virtual reality games can allow purchase of NFTs

What is the Value Proposition for NFTs?

Bridging the gap between the physical and digital world allows for events and concepts to have tangible commercial worth. The decentralized platform brings control back to the creators eliminating the middleman. The tokenization of objects allows for value to be divided into smaller fragments opening up ownership to all investors both small and large. In the new world of the Metaverse, NFT's will forge into ownership of property.

Choose your coins wisely!

The Next big idea will come from NFTs
